Italian Americans of the Greater Mahoning Valley-Dr. Donna M. DeBlasio and Dr. Martha I. Pallante 2015
Between 1890 and 1924, Italian immigrants flocked to Ohio's Mahoning Valley. The area's burgeoning iron and steel industries beckoned with job prospects for immigrants fleeing southern and eastern Europe-- particularly from southern Italy, a region that at the time lacked opportunity and highly taxed its natives. Upon the arrival of these new residents, neighborhoods such as Youngstown's Smoky Hollow and Brier Hill offered accepting communities, and Niles Fire Brick Factory Company and Trumbull Blast Furnace provided employment. Assimilation was not always easy, and discrimination did occur, but Italian Americans ultimately prospered, making a mark not only as steelworkers but also as shopkeepers, grocers, restaurateurs, tradesmen, educators, doctors, lawyers, legislators, and mayors. This book explores the immigration experience, community, workplace dynamics, celebrations, worship, heritage, and lasting impact of the second-largest ethnic group in Ohio's Mahoning Valley.

The Moving Picture World- 1916

The Labyrinth-Dorothy Jane Mills 2003-04 HERE´S A BRIEF SUMMARY: In this sequel to the "riveting" historical novel The Sceptre, Austrian immigrant Katya Becker, learning in 1938 of Germany´s threat to invade her old homeland, returns to Europe and comes face to face with Hitler. She helps relay German invasion plans to Eleanor Roosevelt and unearths spies in Hawaii. While discovering her own tangled heritage, she also learns of her new lover´s secret role. AND HERE´S SOME INTERPRETIVE BACKGROUND, WRITTEN BY THE AUTHOR: A recent play about Hitler as an aspiring young artist drew criticism for a supposedly sympathetic portrayal of the man we know became a monster. My just-published historical novel, The Labyrinth, shows him at a different point in his life: the spring of 1938, as he prepares to take over Austria and is browbeating and threatening its chancellor, who is a guest at Hitler's compound, The Berghof. Eva Braun is there, and so is my main character, Katya Becker, a former Austrian and Eva's guest. Katya overhears Hitler's tirade. Horrified, she escapes from The Berghof and is pursued as far as Canada. The Labyrinth is the sequel to The Sceptre, which reviewers have called "riveting," "surprisingly funny," "impressive," "a real page-turner," "irresistible," "original," "clever," and "well-researched." So far only one reviewer has read The Labyrinth (Jean Ardell, who directs a writing lab at the University of California), and she calls it "engaging." When she read The Sceptre, she called it "a thrill" and said it kept her up at night reading; "I even played hookey from work to get to the end." In The Sceptre, Katya returns to Austria to search for the source and meaning of ancient symbols she uses in her work as a designer. She uncovers a Nazi plot to disrupt the Salzburg Festival of 1935 and helps foil an attempt to kidnap Toscanini. In The Labyrinth, Katya comes up against Hitler himself, and in escaping from him she is pursued as far as Canada. Then she has a further adventure in Hawaii. Hitler and the Nazis are perennially fascinating subjects for historians and writers. Some of us even perform the research necessary for an accurate portrayal of the period and the people involved. Historians as well as other authors and librarians have praised my work highly. Readers have learned unexpected facts from my work. First, they learned from historical and dramatic flashbacks in both books that the Kelts are the ancestors of many Austrians. They also learned, despite those images we've been shown of Austrians welcoming the German Nazis into their country, that the Austrian aristocrats were among the most determined anti-Nazis of the time. I interviewed several aristocrats and read about many more. So the Austrians are really both victims and perpetrators in their own sad history during World War Two.
